It is the journey of the spirit. . .the inner journey where we let go of the way we have known, we lose the way, we search for the way, and we find the way. We continually seek meaning in life and ponder the course of our inner direction. . .we find a depth that we did not know existed. . .we find that eternal dwelling of PEACE within. The paradox is that when we enter the home of our God, we also enter the home of our true self. (Homesick Cranes)
